Miscellaneous musings from your 2025 APA President

January is over, and the groundhog thinks he knows better than those meteorologists. We'll see.

The APA Conference was another great success. Many thanks are needed for our great staff and the Events and Education Committee for all the hard work that went into making things happen. And, of course, a special thanks to all those who presented at the various sessions. A huge thanks to Marsha Godeaux for her time to keep our Texas members updated on the happenings in access compliance in Texas. But, above all, I'd like to thank John Wodatch for his presentations and his life's work, bringing accessibility to us through his efforts at the federal level, both professionally and personally. He is an icon in the accessibility world.

Speaking of icons and images, APA will soon have an updated logo. The update was necessary to address issues discussed elsewhere in this newsletter. Conference participants provided useful feedback on the options presented. Thanks to everyone who offered their thoughts. Of course, only one could be selected.

Getting back to that groundhog...

The APAC exam is proving its worth. As a general test of accessibility standards knowledge, it is dividing those who know from those who think they know. Don't be a groundhog. Take the exam and prove you know your stuff!

The APA 2025 National Conference was a huge success!

APA extends our deepest gratitude to everyone who contributed to the resounding success of the 2025 National Conference! Your participation, dedication, and enthusiasm made this event truly memorable.

To our attendees: Thank you for your engagement, insightful questions, and commitment to advancing accessibility.

To our keynote, presenters, and facilitators: We are immensely grateful for your expertise, passion, and willingness to share your knowledge.

To our exhibitors and sponsors: We appreciate your support and commitment to fostering a more inclusive world. A heartfelt thank you to Marsha Godeaux (TDLR) and Katie Baker (Round Rock Parks and Recreation) for helping with the offsite visit to the Play for All Park.

To our APA Education and Events Committee: We are deeply grateful for your hard work and commitment. Special thanks to Angela Shapiro for chairing the committee with such dedication. We also appreciate Tom Ellis for serving as the conference photographer; many of the photos in this newsletter are courtesy of Tom.

We're excited for the future and hope you'll join us for more APA events!

A new look is coming to APA

APA is evolving! Building on the momentum of the 2025 National Conference theme, "Moving into the Future," we're thrilled to announce a comprehensive rebranding over the next few months, including a streamlined website (APAaccess.org), a centralized member hub, a convenient mobile app, and an updated logo.

Those who attended the National Conference at the end of January had the opportunity to preview and give their opinion on the new, redesigned APA logo. Changing the logo may have brought up some questions from some people. Questions like, why did we need to change it?

APAC Program updates

- The APAC Program is excited to announce that we've applied for national accreditation through NCCA! We expect good news by the spring, and we'll keep you posted.
- APAC is thrilled to collaborate again with the Great Plains ADA Symposium. The paper-and-pencil exam will be offered on Tuesday, June 17, at a discounted rate of 50% off the testing fee, in addition to the exam application fee. Click here to register.
- APAC will soon be offering a multi-day prep course on the topics covered by the APAC-BE exam. While the course will not give specific insight into the exam content, the presentations will be offered by the leaders in accessibility.
- Congrats to all our new APAC-BEs! The list of all APAC-BE certificants can be found on the APAC website, APACexam.org.

2024 APA President's Award

Kim Hooker has been honored with the 2024 APA President's Award! 2024 President Charles Watt presented the award at last month's APA Annual Meeting, recognizing Kim's outstanding leadership and years of dedicated service as Chair of the Technical Standards Committee. Join us in congratulating Kim on this remarkable achievement!

What makes a ground surface accessible?

While the federal accessibility standards and state building codes require accessible surfaces to be firm, stable, and slip-resistant, the standards do not specify a test method to objectively measure various surfaces such as carpets; vinyl; decking; synthetic sport surfaces; engineered wood fiber, poured-in-place rubber, crumb rubber, and hybrid systems with an overlay over loose fill material or padding used on playgrounds; portable path and modular decking used on beaches; and crushed limestone, decomposed granite, and surface stabilizers used on pedestrian trails.
